About Hult Prize

Founded by Ahmad Ashkar, a graduate of the Hult International Business School, in 2009, the Hult Prize has become the largest student competition and open platform for social welfare.

HULT PRIZE

The Hult Prize works with the United Nations, former President of the United States Bill Clinton, and the Hult International Business School every year, encouraging students to innovate and found social enterprises for solving the most urgent global problems.

The ultimate Hult Prize winner will receive a seed fund of $1 million, as well as mentorship and advice from international business leaders.

Your 2022 Challenge

HULT PRIZE 2022 CHALLENGE

GETTING THE WORLD BACK TO WORK

Your 2022 challenge is to create two-thousand jobs by 2024 by thinking global and acting local!

Your 2022 Challenge

GETTING THE WORLD BACK TO WORK

The innovation we seek to inspire for this year's challenge is all about execution. Forget about being clever and “inventing” the next big thing. We believe that, “thing” is already out there and we want you to bring it to your community along with the proven business model behind it. You will find inspiration by focusing on major unmet consumer needs and thinking about how to satisfy existing market demand in a new way—one that enables you to get to your first sale before our next Hult Prize Impact Summit. The global economy is coming back, and you may never find a better time than now to create a high-impact, job-creating enterprise that brings your own community back to life.
